THE WORLD OVER

SMITH FREED IN TORONTO CASE

NATIONS INCREASE ARMAMENTS

TORONTO—After deliberating six hours and 15 minutes a jury acquitted A.E. Smith, general secretary of the Canadian Labor Defence League, of a charge of sedition uttered in 1932 involving Prime Minister R.B. Bennett. He was alleged to have charged the Prime Minister with ordering the shooting of Tim Buck, Communist prisoner at Kingston penitentiary, during the convict insurrections of 1932.

Smith, Methodist church minister of Brandon who discarded his clerical garb during the Winnipeg Labor riots of 1932, is cleared of all charges.

The shadow of the warships, most costly implement of war, is cast over the world again.

Four world powers looked to their navies this week—three of them making plans for enlarging the fleets.

The British Admiralty presented 1934 estimate calling for the construction of four carriers and 20 other vessels, an increase of 2.8% in the fleet personnel and expenditures of about $257,000,000.

The United States Senate passed the Naval Construction bill and returned it to the House of Representatives for action on Senate changes, including limitations on private contract profits and the requirement that the government build one-fourth of the more than 1,000 aeroplanes provided.

The French Chamber of Deputies recently approved a project to build a 2,600-ton battle cruiser, a sister-ship of the huge Dunkerque now under construction.

Two new submarines and a torpedo destroyer are included in the French naval program for 1934, and a pocket cruiser of Germany.

The authoritative Italian newspaper, Gioriale D'Italia, indicated Italy would build a 25,000-ton battleship to counterbalance the French Dunkerque.

ELIZABETH MINERVA TRICKER
APPOINTED EXECUTRIX, FARM

Administration rights over the $19,660 estate of the late Bert Tricker, Swaywell district farmer, who died on August 4th, 1933, were granted at the Calmar courthouse last week. Probate was issued to Elizabeth Minerva Tricker, the widow.

Application was made August 23rd, and probate was granted September 1st. Gross value of the estate is $19,639.39, assets amounting to $1,000, leaving a debt of a farm valued at $1,000, and lots in Swaywell worth $1,000.

Other needs included mortgaged values at $2400, $1000 in life insurance,

40 hours of cattle valued at $500 and

45 swine worth $200. The widow is to sole beneficiary.

A long silent pause was continually interrupted by the bondholder who was going on while he was trying to speak. "Really, gentlemen," he said "with all this noise going on I can scarcely hear myself speak." "Cheer up," shot a man at the back, you ain't moseing much."

WILL THERE BE ELECTION THIS SUMMER IN ALBERTA?

That the Alberta government would continue its non-committal policy in regard to the Co-operative Commonwealth Federation throughout the year.

That immediately following the close of the session there would be a cabinet shake-up.

That certain elements in the cabinet would insist upon the cleavage being made between the party and com-in both the cabinet and the C.P.A. members in the legislature.

That a general provincial election would be called soon after the close of the session. The election fraction seems on a platform of social legislation on a wide scale and of urgent drastic changes in the B.N.A. Act.

These were the forecasts made in rumors which each day take more definite form in local political circles.

WHAT ABOUT SOCIAL CREDIT, CANADA?

This series is an explanation of the Douglas Social Credit Plan. Mr. William Jones (G) The scene is Mr. William's home and the conversation takes place during an evening visit.

No. 7
J. You spoke of the error in costing. What is it?

W. "Major Douglas says that the core of the problem is Cost, and it is the part of the Social Credit doctrine that is most difficult to grasp. I suppose it is not so easy to understand how to appreciate the plan than the soundness of what we call the A plus B theorem you will be compelled to admit that one plus one but Mr. Douglas has explained it in a simple way."

J. "A plus B theorem? This is beginning to sound technical."

W. "It is hard to avoid all technicalities, but these letters are used to denote the sum of two numbers."

J. "I. E. X marks the spot, eh?"

W. "Well, at any rate A plus B marks the flaw in the price system. Well, I think we have cleared the decks in our minds as far as the basic problem lies before us with some understanding what comprises Consumer Purchasing Power. If you consider for a moment you will see that personal purchases in forms of wages and salaries etc. are the only source of the Consumer Purchasing Power, and that these incomes consist of money paid out in the first place by Industry. Now an industrialist's desire to make a profit determines the price of his product. It is this consumer purchasing power that is accessible for claiming the product of that plant. The rate of flow of prices cannot be less than A plus B. The reason for this is that the cost of producing power is only "A". It is an impossibility for that plant to sell all that it produces unless some part equal at least to "B" is distributed by some other means."

W. "I am all mixed up. I am all confused. This looks like quite bitter medicine of algebra. Can't you show me in a different way?"

W. "All right, here goes. Suppose you have a car and a garage and tools and your costs for raw materials, interest charges, depreciation, etc. are $800. Now your total costs are $1300, but you only distribute $500 to buy goods. You have $800 left over which you cannot sell at your normal unless it is kindly supplied by some other agency. Seeing that every factory and production organization is in the same position Douglas's statement must be true."

"Our wages, salaries and dividends distributed (not employing practically all money incomes and therefore the sum of consumer purchasing power) over any given period of time do not and cannot hold the whole of that production, which can only be bought by a draft, and an increasing draft, the purchasing power does not result in full production, which purchasing power can only come from future loans and overdrafts."

You see the trouble. A ($800). B ($300). A plus B ($1100). Five hundred dollars in purchasing power cannot buy goods priced at thirteen hundred dollars."

J. "That's too simple! There's something wrong with that analysis."

W. "Well, what is it? If you can prove it, you're the first one to do so since it was formulated fourteen years ago."

J. "Fourteen years! Why I thought this Douglas was just another of those self-styled products by this department."

W. "Yes, so do a lot of people who do not take the trouble to investigate anything thoroughly before forming

TO SEEK DIRECTION IN DAMAGE ACTION AGAINST BROWNLEE

The damage action for alleged obstruction through municipal election expenses of Mr. Brownlee of Alberta by ex-Minister McMillan of Edison, Alta., and his daughter, Vivian, entered on another track this week when Neil D. MacLean, K.C. counsel for the two plaintiffs filed his defense. The defense will apply for directions as to whether the case will be set down for trial.

Mr. Justice Boyle is the presiding judge in chambers and will be asked to give directions for directions of the parties, to make a report on the inspection of documents to state when the action shall be set down for trial and whether it shall be heard by a jury.

In view of the President's attendance at the present session of the legislature, counsel is said to have deferred bringing the application for directions until the end of the legislative session is within sight.

Justice Boyle is chambers entitled by law. Is it possible the case will be set for the July sittings which commence on the last Monday in April?

point out that a business must recover all of its costs if it is to remain solvent. We must be able to claim the profits in the goods. In these costs can be separated into two groups. First there are the wages and salaries etc. of the staff and, second, all other expenses such as raw material, office expenses, telephone, etc. You will note that the staff and group consists of payments to organizations or individuals outside of this factory. The first group are indirect costs for they do not go directly to the cost of that item. Here is where the profit is lost.

We call all the inside payments "A" and we call all the outside payments "B".

"Therefore the total costs of the firm can be expressed in this form. A plus B plus C plus D plus E, etc. The amount of money distributed in this factory is the amount represented by "A" plus "B" which is obviously less than A plus B. Now you see that "A" will not purchase A plus B and yet we have to pay for "A" plus B. All the consumers purchasing power that is accessible for claiming the product of that plant. The rate of flow of prices cannot be less than A plus B. The reason for this is that the cost of producing power is only "A". It is an impossibility for that plant to sell all that it produces unless some part equal at least to "B" is distributed by some other means."

This is the result of travellers and motorists taking passengers on their regular trips, and people are warned to refrain from accepting such passengers at all times.

Hearty vote of thanks was passed to the retiring president, Mr. Brownlee, for his services to the Club during the past year.

Mr. G. W. Price was again appointed caretaker of the courts.

A membership committee, consisting of Norman Nash and Mrs. Williams was appointed.

The plan of the Alberta Lawn Tennis Association was read and discussed, and it was decided to enter teams in each of the three inter-town tennis competitions, via Men's, Women's and Junior Men's.

LAWN TENNIS CLUB ANNUAL MEETING HELD

John Spence is 1934 President; W. Paxon, Jr. Vice-President.

The annual meeting of the Carbon Lawn Tennis Club was held on Wednesday evening, March 14th, and was well attended by the racquet enthusiasts of the town.

The following officers were elected for 1934:

President, Mr. P. Edwards;

Honorary Vice-President, Ch. Nas;

President, Jack Acme;

Vice-President, W. Paxon, Jr.

Secretary-Treasurer, W.A. Braisell;

Executive Committee, Misses D. Nas;

Mr. E. Huland, the president, vice-president, and all past presidents in good standing.

Mr. Brown pointed out that this was a secondary highway and would help the relief fund.

Premier Brownlee said the road would serve a great need and would fit into an ultimate highway scheme, but at present the government did not have the money for all projects asked for and it would be carried out only on an unemployment relief scheme basis.

Premier Brownlee said the highway program depended on the extent of the Dominion relief program and the extent to which interest rates were reduced.

Mr. G. W. Price was again appointed caretaker of the courts.

A membership committee, consisting of Norman Nash and Mrs. Williams was appointed.

The plan of the Alberta Lawn Tennis Association was read and discussed, and it was decided to enter teams in each of the three inter-town tennis competitions, via Men's, Women's and Junior Men's.

Like the delegates from Carbon expressed their belief after returning from Edmonton, that the road would be built on the relief scheme program. While they received no promises, they had a very attentive hearing and the decision as it was, covered a large territory which would be served by a new road.

The World's Great Handicap

In an address delivered recently at Watrous, Sask., Professor Swanson of the University of Saskatchewan, said he could see signs on the horizon of a return to economic sanity, but "fear is in the way." He said: "Interest rates are high, political influence is great, fear of depression is strong, fear of inflation is widespread and abounding with force. The time has now arrived," he added, "to take place of leadership in our country, in overcoming these fears. On the Western plains there is no place for fear."

Then in the United States we have Bruce Barton, one of the most eloquent and most popular of the day, pointing out that the economists never paid much attention to the question of personal finance, and passed and that business is fundamentally better all over the world while of his own country he says it is now in the position of a sick man on his way back to health; that while a great many medicines are being applied, some of which probably help the patient's recovery and some of which hurt him, the main trouble is that he is refusing to admit that the country can stand a considerable dose of patient treatment without getting well again and that when the country is really healthy it will throw the patent medicine bottles out of the window, discharging the most radical doctors, and go on its way.

Bruce Barton, however, points to a very important truth—the people to whom money and credit are given are the ones who are most afraid of money. Things never again are going to be the same as they were; on the other hand, they are not going to be so entirely different as some enthusiastic people would have us believe. It is, he says, no use sighing for the return of the good old days; it is even less useful to assume that the past was bad and must be discarded. His advice is: "Keep moderate, keep realistic."

Most important, says Bruce Barton, "fight all fear"; and he urges that the words of Thorac be placed where they can be seen every day: "Nothing is so much to be afraid of as fear itself. The sin that God hates is fear; He thinks atheism innocent in comparison."

It is the fear of the unknown that is the greatest obstacle to a return to more normal conditions throughout the world. It is fear that prevents disarmament and continues to impose upon the taxpayers of the nations the crushing burden of huge armies, navies, air fleets, and the whole complicated paraphernalia of war establishments. It is fear that leads nations to erect hostile tariffs against the goods and services of other nations. It is fear that causes men of money to lock up their money instead of it circulating through all the channels of business and providing work and wages for countless thousands at present unemployed. It is fear that is distorting the minds of people and making them the easy victims of others who preach the gospel of discontent and despair.

For the moment, nothing can be done for progress. Being destructive of constructive thought and initiative, it acts as a brake on progress, preventing the launching of new enterprises, discouraging expansion and further developments. Through the engendering of timidity and lack of self-confidence, fear leads men to withdraw into themselves and behind isolation protest devices which protect others but do not help them. In a word, fear makes man stand with his hands clasped on life and death.

It is the future of which most people appear to be fearful. They decline to recognize and accept the lessons and experiences of the past as having any bearing upon or offering any guide for the problems and experiences of the present. Instead, in their fear, they say present difficulties are different from those of the past, and that the solutions of the past will not apply to other persons or persons know what to do or what ought to be done.

So, in their fear, they will not take actions which would not only accomplish something but would inspire others to action, and the cumulative effect of which would be a solving of difficulties. Work would be provided for hundreds and thousands of men and women, and the world would be better off. Let us take their courage in their hands and proceed to have this, that or the other little job done which demands attention. But, no, they will not venture even a small expenditure and thus they retard progress and help to perpetuate a condition of things which, if continued, will mean their own ruin.

Wise parents seek to overcome fear on the part of their children. They do so reasonably but persistently, because they realize that the obsession of fear is the greatest possible handicap in life. Wise leaders of the Canadian people in all walks of life should join forces in waging war on fear which now possesses so many, and they should join battle with those who are engaged in capitalizing fear as an agency in the advancement of feelings of economic despair.

Saskatchewan Homesteads

Special Consideration To Be Given To

Veterans Of The Great War
Granting special rebates to veterans of the Great War who served in an actual theatre of war, but also applying to all purchasers to the extent that free homesteads are practically obtainable again in Saskatchewan, and the same will be made active to 1929, will shortly be announced by the government. Under the new regulations all provincial lands will be available with the exception of those reserved for timber reserves, and the first choices for 1925 and 1926 have already been forgone and if conditions warrant, no interest will be charged in 1925. But, in any event, the rate will be cut to five per cent. Several thousand buyers will benefit.

A factory at Stron, Maine, turns out approximately 50,000,000 lozenges daily.

Household Drudgery

The Bane of a Woman's Life

Nature intended women to be strong and healthy and she is. She can do her share of work and have good health when she has to go through the household drudgery without any relaxation. It is any woman's desire to live a life free from pain, aches, fatigue and disease, especially of the heart, sinking and aching sensations, and can't sleep at night.

Women who are weak and run down will find in Milburn's H. & N. Pills a remedy to strengthen the system and bring back the much desired health.

Wingless Rooster In Smithsonian Institute

Only Case Known To Science Where Such Birds Have Lived

A wingless rooster recently received by the Smithsonian Institution has defied precedents established by prior taxonomists, who have contended with what heretofore has lived to grow into healthy adulthood minus the customary appendages. In all other such cases known to science the wingless birds have died while still young.

The present specimen was found in the flock of Mrs. Otto Deering, of Rose Hill, Ky., who sent it to the institution. Its behavior seems to be normal in most respects, but it is afraid to make jumps which would be natural to ordinary chickens. It hesitates a long time, for instance, before jumping from a table to the floor to obtain food, even when it is very hungry.

Far-Seeing Romanticist

Frenchman Predicted Phonograph
Long Before It Became

Admirers of Theodore Gautier, the great French romanticist, point out that he foreshadowed the phonograph many years before it became a reality. In 1847 Gautier wrote in Le Rêve: "One day it will be possible to make a complete plate relative and preserve the vibrations of sound, and thus conserve and perpetuate a melody by Mario, a tirade by Rachel, or a couplet by Lemire, and to repeat it at any hour, by means of a string hanging on the wall the serenade of Don Pasquale, the imprecations of Camille, the love declarations of Flora Blas—records of an evening when the artiste is in good form."

Answering Hurry Call

Frenemy Were On Their Way But Forgot Address

Two young girls, members of Sarah Lawrence College at Bronxville, have heard about the shock a Scarsdale family had one night, about a quarter past eleven. Mumma and Daddy and the kiddies had all gone to bed when the little finger began to burn.

The husband just turned over in bed, but the wife got up and went to the window. She saw three or four fire engines standing practically in front of the house.

And suddenly her husband rang. Shouting at her husband (who still didn't get up), she threw something about her shoulders and went down and opened the door. "What's the matter, your poor lady?" asked a big fireman standing there. "Yes," she said.

"Where's the fire?" "Gotta find out,"

she brushed past her. "We all gotta find out," sinking and another sensation, and can't sleep at night.

Kubekli's Fingers Valuable

Famous Violinist Has Them Insured

For Large Sum

The fingers of Kubekli, the violinist, are heavily insured. The first, second and third fingers and the thumb of his left hand are insured for $10,000, while the little finger is insured for $11,000.

The right hand is cheaper. The first, second and third fingers are insured for $4,500 for the three. The thumb is assessed at $4,500; the little finger at $2,350.

Mix and sift together the first quantity of sugar, the salt and the yolks of the eggs, add the cold water and boil until thickened. Add well beaten yolks and stir until the mixture is smooth. Pour the mixture into previously baked tart shells and when well set, add the cold stewed apricots mixed with the second quantity of sugar. Beat the mixture well and stir in the beaten whites of the eggs, and beat until the mixture holds its shape. Brown slightly in a rather hot oven.

Producing Poultice Meat

Experiments at the Central Experimental Farm, Ottawa, have shown that it takes 24½ pounds of mixed grain to grow Barred Rock cockerels to twenty-six weeks of age, weighing 1,660 grams each, and that, in this weight, 45% of grain is converted into meat.

With a good class of Barred Rock chicks, 4½ pounds of grain can be converted into one pound of meat.

The lighter breeds consume an average of six pounds of feed for each pound of gain in meat.

SYNOPSIS

Camilla Hoyt and Peter Anson, young and in love, marry secretly, deciding to live their own lives apart until Peter can earn enough money to support them. Peter is a young, struggling sculptor trying to win a competition for a statue of a child. Camilla is the adopted daughter of a wealthy family. She is not to inherit money, when she grows up, but she is studying commercial art in the hope of getting a job in a big city. Others in the story include a good-natured, wealthy girl who is trying to win Peter's heart; Todd, Peter's model, and Miss Bowman, his former mate with whom he has quarreled. At a party at an expensive club Peter meets a woman who has gifts with impersonations. When the members of the party go to a beach, Peter continues to see Miss Bowman and Camilla's mother likewise. Bowman and Weeks, an advertising agency, are to receive a commission of some of her work, send for her and tell her they have a job for her. Peter has the usual treatment of juvenile art. To Camilla's surprise she learns that the account of the agency is with a company which has decided on an extensive campaign to bolster up advertising. Peter and Camilla decide to attempt the work. The critics were favorable, and Peter and Mrs. Weeks offer her a salary of $50.00 a week to start and a prospectus of $100.00 a week if she will have been present for all he was noticing her or thinking about her.

They were in the room now. He lit the door lamp. "Well, we're on the beach," he explained. She moved over to the clay figure on the turntable and stood gazing at it early morning and Avis and another boy. "I'm afraid it's too early to make it necessary for Camilla to announce before the party go to a beach, but Peter made no move to enter to her own room. He pushed his door open and she sauntered across the hall.

"Just let me have one piece," Peter said, taking a handkerchief from his pocket and handing it over. "I want to see your rooms. I only had a glimpse of them once before."

"There's only one," he replied, shrugging his shoulders. "An interruption would be like a century to me. I can't go into seclusion all of a sudden. Besides, even if I do want to, I can't take it if that seriously. I want to have a lot of fun, and I don't care if it's a little bit foolish, but I'm going to give a housewarming soon and you will have to take time out to be there, don't you forget. You and Camilla," she added as an afterthought.

There were footsteps outside, tapping on the stairs and along the hall, and presently Sylvia stood in the doorway. "Hello," she said briefly, after a glance at Avis without recognition.

"Here she is!" Peter exclaimed with obvious relief. "My model, Miss Todd. Miss Worth. You may be needing a good model yourself. New project?" he asked. Sylvia was smiling, and her dress was more becoming than the one Columbus was using and in away ways even superior to the one we use to-day."

"The new neighbor turned out to be an old friend," Peter explained casually.

"That's nice," observed Sylvia. "I never knew that it is to race," he contradicted. "There is no worse nuisance in the world for a serious artist than a make-believe one who doesn't have to work but maintains a stud just for effect and a place to play." He turned to his model. "It would be just my luck to get such a neighbor when I am the busier. I'm afraid she's going to be a pest."

"You don't sound very crazy about her," Sylvia murmured uneasily.

"She's nothing but trouble," Peter shrugged. "I said she was a friend. She isn't even that—merely a acquaintance. One of the class at National Art School. I think she's been here since I could. Now she lives across the hall and suggests that I run up to her tea with her," he grimaced.

Sylvia laughed with genuine mirth. "I think she's been in that situation than he was aware. Almost, she was tempted to warn him of Avis' intentions for her sympathies really were with Peter. But now suddenly, with a look of surprise, she realized that any man could take care of himself. The chances were nine-nine-one to that any woman would take him if it was finished."

Camilla, she thought, does ne never talk nor think of anything except Camilla and work? She feigned an interest in the book and said, "I think nothing would take the first place from a husband," she shrugged. "But, then, all people aren't alike. Love and marriage mean so little to some girls. No wonder men can't understand them."

The two girls talked a while. There needs lots of love and sympathy and comforting to make him happy and keep him so," she observed wistfully with a tone of regret for all the wicked marriages of such negligent mothers.

"What do you know about it?" Peter only seemed to be amused. He did not attempt to defend Camilla.

"Some women are wives by inher since the Hoyt party at the club. "Hello," Peter said, addressing him as though he had been a tenant in Annex Hall for a long time.

"Why—how do you do, Miss Worth?" he could not conceal his surprise. "So you are the new neighbor."

"Are you sorry?" she laughed at his consternation.

"Of course, not," he hastened to assure her. "What could be more pleasant than a friend for a neighbor?" "I'm afraid you will find very sociable. I've so busy these days I can't find time to eat."

"Working on your piece for the exhibit?" Avis observed with an eager concern. "How does it go?" I think you are the new neighbor."

"He ignored that. "But why the outburst?" he indicated that spacious studio apartment.

Started a pouting expression: "That's nice of you! Can't I talk to you about business as well as pleasure?"

"I can't help it. I can't accomplish anything at home. Oceans of room, but no one will take me seriously or respect my privacy. So I came here. As for being a neighbor, I don't think you'd like it."

"I'll be just as busy as you are. So there!" Only her eyes were lowered for a moment and then met his wistfully. "This is an idea—there is a lot of time you can't spend looking for a neighbor. I'm afraid you'll be a good neighbor, even."

Peter drew away. "I'm sorry. I'll have to endure the suspense of waiting until later to see your place. My model would be here any minute. We've got to get to work. I told you I can't be a good neighbor, even."

"Then do come over this evening," she urged him. "Any time you are in town, stop in. You work every minute!"

"But I might interrupt your work. I thought you came here for seclusion."

Avis lifted her hands slowly. "I'm afraid it would be like a century to me. I can't go into seclusion all of a sudden. Besides, even if I do want to, I can't take it if that seriously. I want to have a lot of fun, and I don't care if it's foolish, but I'm going to give a housewarming soon and you will have to take time out to be there, don't you forget. You and Camilla," she added as an afterthought.

"Just let me have one piece," Peter said, taking a handkerchief from his pocket and handing it over. "I want to see your rooms. I only had a glimpse of them once before."

"There's only one," he replied, shrugging his shoulders. "An interruption would be like a century to me. I can't go into seclusion all of a sudden. Besides, even if I do want to, I can't take it if that seriously. I want to have a lot of fun, and I don't care if it's foolish, but I'm going to give a housewarming soon and you will have to take time out to be there, don't you forget. You and Camilla," she added as an afterthought.

There were footsteps outside, tapping on the stairs and along the hall, and presently Sylvia stood in the doorway. "Hello," she said briefly, after a glance at Avis without recognition.

"Here she is!" Peter exclaimed with obvious relief. "My model, Miss Todd. Miss Worth. You may be needing a good model yourself. New project?" he asked. Sylvia was smiling, and her dress was more becoming than the one Columbus was using and in away ways even superior to the one we use to-day."

"The new neighbor turned out to be an old friend," Peter explained casually.

Peter's prognostications proved correct about Avis becoming a nuisance. It was only the second day after she had moved in the hall, when he had made no attempt to respond to her hospitable suggestion to drop in any minute, that she knocked on his door about noon, and to his great consternation, he invited her in. She was dressed in a dark, dark coat, a dark, dark hat, and a dark, dark coat.

Medical Insurance Plan

Alberta Commission Investigates Possibilities of State Medical Service

An ultimate $10,608,000 municipalized medical insurance scheme for the province is recommended by a report to the legislature in 1932 to investigate the possibilities of a general medical insurance plan.

If one analysis is correct, the cost of medical insurance would be approximately $100,000,000 per year.

For frontier districts the insurance would be provided by a state physician or a state medical board.

THE CHRONICLE

Mrs. Alice Reid Sr. was taken suddenly ill on Sunday morning and has been under the doctor's care.

The old time March winds have been with us this week and a dust storm swept the country on Tuesday.

Spring seems to be here. There is no snow and frost has disappeared from the ground. It won't be long before our farmers are on the land now. The animals are out everywhere and trees are budding out. Everything points to spring.

A farewell party was held at Hotel on Friday, March 15th, for Mr. A. Johnson who has been transferred to the Alberta Power Commission at Lethbridge.

The evening was spent in cards and dancing. Ross Thorburn and Mrs. R. Barber being the pitie winners at cards.

Mr. Poole was presented with a purse of money by his many friends.
